Shane Prince, LW

Shoots: L

Height: 5-11

Weight: 185

Born: 1992-11-16

Hometown: Spencerport, NY, USA

Drafted: 2011 by Ottawa, 61st overall

Observations:

May 2013 - In his first pro season with Binghamton, Prince had a respectful start scoring 17 goals and 18 assists for 35 points in 65 games. This former OHL scoring star must learn to play at both ends of the ice and until he does on a consistent basis he is still a few years away from a spot on the NHL roster. Alain Dube

July 2012 – He has officially signed his three year entry-level contract and will join the Sens' at camp and likely be assigned to a strong Binghamton team and should contribute right away. Prince finished with 90 regular season points for the 67's along with 16 in the playoffs. Jason Banks

February 2012 – Shane Prince has really turned it up offensively the past two seasons after a slow first couple years in the OHL. He has benefitted from playing on one of the best lines in the OHL alongside Tyler Toffoli with the Ottawa 67's. Prince is a fast skater who is known as a strong playmaker with soft hands. This season Prince put together a very impressive point streak of 20 games (and counting) as of the end of February. Listed generously at 5-11 and 185lbs, Prince could be much more effective if he added more bulk to his frame. Thomas Wall

Fantasy Outlook : C+

Look for Prince on Ottawa's farm team in Binghamton next season as he adjusts to pro level hockey. If history is any indication, he will take time before he makes any impact.
