Brad Ross, LW

Shoots: L

Height: 6-1

Weight: 183

Born: 1992-05-28

Hometown: Lethrbidge, AB, Canada

Drafted: 2010 by Toronto, 43 rd overall

Observations:

April 2013 – Since the lockout ended, Ross has found himself in a regular role in the Marlies' lineup as an energy player. His is playing well and creates opportunities off of his tenascious fore checking. He is also showing a knack for scoring hardworking, garbage goals that win games. In Ross' last 14 games be has eight points and 34 shots on goal. He is even earning secondary power play time and chipping in. He needs more development time and add more meat to his frame in the off season, but his development is trending upwards. Jason Banks

December 2012 – Ross has provided good energy and hard work in only five games so far this season. If the lockout never happened, one would expect to see his hard work pay off with being a regular in the lineup and some production. Jason Banks

February 2012 – Brad Ross is a solid, agitating forward that has shown he can put the puck in the net. Ross has been cut by Team Canada twice, but just getting invited to World Junior Camp is an accolade in itself. Playing on the strong Portland Winterhawks team, Ross has been chugging along at well over a point-per-game this year. Ross has 69 points in 55 games. If not for a few lengthy suspensions, Ross would have even more points. If he can stay on the ice, look for him to be a big part of the Winterhawks playoff push.

Fantasy Outlook : C

Developing into a hard-nosed player with an ability to contribute offensively. 2013-14 will be a big year as he should be a core player in the AHL and show signs of where he is going for the organization.

Footage:

Scoring goals and causing a stir; Brad Ross at his finest:

{youtube}pigEQfCyng4{/youtube}

Fantasy Prospects Report Notes (Any FPR's released in the last 18 months will not be listed here):

Buy the latest Fantasy Prospects Report here.

Brad Ross statistics courtesy of Elite Hockey Prospects