Sebastian Collberg, RW/LW

Shoots: R

Height: 5-11

Weight: 174

Born: 1994-02-23

Hometown: Mariestad, Sweden

Drafted: 2012 by Montreal, 33rd overall

Observations:

May 2013 – Collberg has signed a three-year entry-level contract with the Canadiens. Eric Daoust

April 2013 – Collberg will join the AHL's Hamilton Bulldogs for the final few games of the regular season. He will not see any playoff action because the team is in last place in the Western Conference. This will be a good opportunity to see how far along he is in his development on North American soil. Eric Daoust

April 2013 – Offensively, Collberg struggled this season in the Swedish Elite League with just nine points in 35 games. He did have a good showing in the World Junior Championship with four goals and six points in six games. Without a larger sample of games in while Collberg has had a chance to excel, his realistic potential and estimated arrival time in the NHL remain a mystery. Eric Daoust

September 2012- Collberg was drafted by the Montreal Canadiens this past June. He will look to earn more ice time this year with Frölunda in order to top his previous season output of zero points in 41 games. However, in the European Trophy (a pre-season tournament between select teams from European leagues), Collberg has been given low ice time and has been used as the team's 13th forward in some games. Montreal will look to bring Collberg over to North America next year if he does not develop well with Frölunda. Evan Hotham

March 2012 – Sebastian Collberg is an electric skater and a mesmerizing stick-handler. The 18-year-old boasts a quick and deadly accurate wrist shot, though he has yet to consistently display his offensive skills playing in Sweden's top league. A little undersized, Collberg will spend at least another season or two either in Sweden or in North American minor leagues, bulking up to prepare for the rigors of playing in the NHL.

Fantasy Outlook : B+

He'll accumulate points in bunches but he could also be a future Lady Byng candidate. Those in leagues that reward penalty minutes might want to reconsider.
